

The "Do Not Call" rule has been extremely beneficial and pleasant for me and my family. The interruptions, particularly during the dinner hours, were frustrating and annoying. I travel and look forward to uninterrupted meals with my family. To return to anything less than what we have today would be unacceptable.

Rather than diluting Indiana's rule the FCC should adopt the Indiana rule for the rest of the nation. I am certain that the majority would support that.